

ELEGANT AND FABULOUS

© Belinda McArdle 2012

You have brand new feathers
I can see how proud you are
Parade them right in front of me
Then step back from afar
To see that I'm still watching you
You're radiant and blue
Fuzzy little feathers and you still don't have a tail
You're elegant and fabulous, you are, you are, you are
Elegant and fabulous you are

Young girl dancing by the stage
For all the world to see
You were moving to the music
The music set you free
You went round and round and round
To the haunting cello sound
No one watched the player
They watched you, you had no clue
You're elegant and fabulous, you are, you are, you are
Elegant and fabulous you are

Ruth out in the ocean
Still inspired at eighty-nine
You dance, you sing, you reminisce
You play the drums in time
There's sadness underneath
Today you say you've lost one of your teeth
Say you're trying not to grin
But you don't know how to begin
You're elegant and fabulous, you are, you are, you are
Elegant and fabulous you are

Elegant and fabulous you are
Elegant and fabulous you are
